NATIONAL FINANCIAL AWARENESS DAY: LEARN HEALTHY SAVINGS HABITS

It's no secret spending is outpacing income in most U.S. households and, of course, this has continued to affect saving rates among Americans nationwide.

According to the Federal Reserve's 2022 Survey of Household Economics and Decision-making, published in October, among adults who were still working, there was a sharp decline in those who felt their retirement savings plan was on track. Among all survey respondents, 18% said the largest emergency expense they could cover with savings was under $100, while an additional 14% said the largest expense they could cover was between $100 and $499. Just over one-half reduced their savings in response to higher prices.

In honor of National Financial Awareness Day, August 14, we're helping members learn healthy savings habits to both protect themselves from emergencies in the short term and position themselves for financial well-being in the future. Through our partner Zogo, the next-gen financial education solution to make financial education available to all, you can learn all this and more through access to over 900 financial modules right from your phone! If you haven't downloaded it already, try out the app and start learning today! Don't forget to use promo code FPCCFCU.
