TACKLE FRAUD BY CHECKING YOUR CREDIT REPORT

Federal law allows you to obtain a free copy of your credit report once every 12 months from each of the three credit bureaus. This is an excellent way to make sure your personal information hasn't been used by someone to commit fraud.

Start the new year off right by visiting annualcreditreport.com to request your free credit reports from Equifax, Experian and TransUnion. Once you obtain your free copy, ensure all the information contained in it is correct and up to date. The information in these reports may affect your your ability to borrow money or rent a property. Look for any suspected or confirmed fraud activity, such as any accounts or credit searches you don't recognize or records of fraud at your address. These could be signs that someone took out a credit card or loan in your name.
